It looks wet to me. If not its fresh overflow.

Yep. Lets see what we've got.

That looks pretty sketchy Lisa. There's a lot of water here... I don't know.

It's water and slush and ice.

Holy crap.

That's kinda a long lake.

I think it's a river.

Is it a river? Oh, it is a river. Oh, that makes it kinda a little bit more sketchy.

Yeah, we've got current.

Yeah, cause the current is underneath.

Warming temperatures have caused the current under the ice to pick up. And the stronger the current gets, the tougher it is for the ice to stay together without fracturing and ultimately collapsing.

All this shit is starting to melt and it's starting to raise the water in the rivers.

Do you think it's going to be thick enough?

I don't think we have much choice.

Yeah.

I think we just run for it.

Okay let's do it.

I'm gunna go here.

Yep, I'll just hang back a little bit.

It's cracking a little bit

Yeah I can hear it popping

Holy --- Darryl! I think I just went down in.

I'm falling through!

Using the loader to try and push the truck is a dangerous plan.

So I've gotta get into this stupid thing now. Dammit. No wonder I fell though. I can't even walk though it!

But with the ice rapidly melting. It's the only option they've got.
